SECTION-A(READING COMPREHENSION)

1. Read the following passage. Make notes (5 marks) and write a summary (4 marks) and give it a suitable title (1 mark) :

The advancement in medical science has increased the life span of people. Today, people live longer than they used to. But unfortunately where science has provided man with longer and healthier life span, it has not provided many solutions for the problems of the aged. Undoubtedly, there has been a marked interest in the problems and psychology of aging in the last couple of years, but not much has been done to make people in their twilight years feel wanted, secure and happy. They feel lonely, bored and unwanted and as a consequence wither away. Love and sense of purpose in life are two things which help man to carry on under most adverse circumstances. Unfortunately, elderly people are devoid of both in the modern society.

Before the advent of industrialisation, people used to live in joint families and as such, even after retirement felt useful, sought after for advice and relived their childhood playing with their grand children. But as the joint family system broke down, and was replaced by nuclear family system, the old people became almost an unwanted lot. The old value system was replaced by a new one bringing about many social and economic changes in the society. Both husband and wife going work for sharing the burden of providing for family. It increased the communication gap and the young could no longer understand or even had time to understand the old people and began to find them interfering, rigid and a nuisance.

Most people do not plan life after retirement or on getting aged, and in Indian context, old people expect to be looked after by their offsprings, as was evident in olden days. Retirement is a period of great psychological, social, economical and physical change and when not provided the proper support, results into the a feeling of a loss of status, identity and social prestige and may take them to confusion and even depression and life seems boring and empty.

In fact it is the time of great social and psychological adjustment for both the young and the old. If they understand and accept it, the problems are fewer.

The new generation is so involved in their work so as to carve out a comfortable life in these competitive time, where everyone seems to be racing against the time. Neither they find time nor seems interested in it, the old are relegated to the position of a housekeeper and baby sitters. They have to be useful to remain in the house and accept whatever comes their way. It effects their health also and virtually they start awaiting death. Some keeping waiting for their own to die comfortably.

It is in the light of these unhappy circumstances, some organizations began to actively think in terms of opening 'Homes For the Aged'. These homes started in the Western countries for a long but now they exist almost everywhere and in every country of the world. The concept is only now gaining acceptance for the aged.

Schools, colleges and voluntary organisations can play a vital role in making the young aware of the needs of the old people by taking them to these 'Homes' to understand the expectations and psychology of these lonely at heart people. It is no longer to be denied that aged need care and love and if they get it at home, there shall be no need of such 'Homes For the Aged'. They worked for us, they lived for us, they earned for us and in return they only need our small time, whenever available, to feel comfortable and loved to live the remaining few years with dignity.

2. Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions given at the end :

Superstitions have played a unique role in the human life right from the beginning of the civilisation. Even today we find many people superstitious about different things and do not want to give them up for one or other reason. In fact the ancient man was ignorant about and at a loss to explain various natural phenomena like thunder, lightening and climatic changes. He knew a little about the sun, moon, comets and meteors etc., so he formulated his own theories about these celestial bodies and happenings and so devised methods to protect himself against their adverse effects. However with the advancement in science, man came to know and understand many heavenly bodies and their characteristics. As a result, the old beliefs should have died down but somehow they continue to have their hold on people even now.

A superstition is a belief, usually born out of fear, which is contrary to reasoning and cannot be proved by experience or logic. For example, a comet was a mysterious phenomenon and was taken to be a sign of imminent plague or war or some big calamity. People also believed that if one looked at the moon for a long time, he would get 'moon struck'. In fact the word 'Lunatic' has been derived from the Latin Word 'Luna' which means 'moon'. The ancient man also failed to understand the behaviour of animals; they built up superstitions about them. A black cat crossing your path was a sign of bad luck. The hooting of an owl at night was a sign of destruction or the approaching death and so on. Over the centuries, superstitions about 'luck' and 'unlucky' numbers also developed. For example, 13 is still considered to be unlucky throughout the world even now.

12thARF(SZ)JKUT2024-25-300-X

Scandinavian countries believed that thunder and lightening were caused when their God Thor threw his hammer at his enemies.

Sneezing is considered to be bad omen. It is why on sneezing people often say 'God bless you'. It is how there are numberless superstitions prevailing over human beings. It is funny and amazing to know that not only illiterate or less literate people are in the grip of so many superstitions but also well educated fail to shed off the superstitious behaviour.

However, with the advancement of Science, a good number of superstitions have definitely decreased, as many people take to rational reasoning, but still there are many of them which continue to have their way into human life and shall remain so even if man has reached moon.

A device that calculates or manipulates data in some way is a computer. However, today, the term computer generally refers to an electronic device that can manipulate data at high speed, with great accuracy and through complex series of steps without human direction.

The heart of such a computer consists of electronic components such as transistors and integrated circuits.

Wired to a huge variety of other devices, computers process numbers, words, electric pulses and many other forms of information in specific ways that are specially useful to particular people and organizations.

Computers can perform millions of complicated mathematical calculations in seconds. They can also be used to produce printed text at blinding speeds, draw complex pictures and control manufacturing processes. In some instances a computer can do in minutes what might take a person a lifetime.

The awesome power of computers along with their widespread use has triggered social and economic changes of great magnitude. Computers in myraid roles in manufacturing have improved the quality and increased the quantity and variety of products. In the process, computers have replaced some workers but have created new jobs for others. Many, perhaps, most people believe that the overall impact of computers has been good. They point to some of the positive aspects of computer use. In medicine, computers have revolutionised many aspects of diagnosis and treatment. In business, they have relieved workers of boring, repetitive tasks and have performed those jobs better and faster. In the home they are also useful, for example, tiny computers in wrist watches, automobiles, television sets, microwave ovens and other products have made them more efficient and reliable.

Other people, however, think that the computer is largely a negative factor. They resent the 'depersonalised' numbers assigned to human beings so that computers can more easily perform such tasks as billing and recording licenses. These people also point to computer errors, which, though infrequent, are sometimes difficult to correct. They also wonder whether the use of the small computers called calculators is not creating a generation of mathematics illiterates. A more serious change is that without computers nuclear weapons and modern warfare would be impossible. Then, there is concern about the opportunity for invasion of individual privacy because of the huge amount of data about people stored in and accessible from computers.

- ✓ 2. Read the passage carefully and answer the questions that follow :

The self-image we harbour is the key to the success or failure of our most cherished plans and aspirations. If the image is inadequate and psychologists say most of us habitually underrate ourselves—it behaves us to correct it. We do this by systematically imagining that we are already the sort of person we wish to be. If you have been painfully shy, imagine yourself moving among people with ease and poise. If you have been fearful and over-anxious, see yourself acting calmly, confidently and with courage.

If we picture ourselves performing in a certain manner, this imaginative exercise impresses our subconscious mind almost as much as does actual performance.

What we believe about ourselves often imposes rigid and quite false limits on what we are able to accomplish.

As a school boy Dr. Alfred Adler, the famous Psychiatrist, got off to a bad start in arithmetic. His teacher became convinced that he was 'dumb in mathematics'.

Adler positively accepted the evaluation and his marks seemed to prove it correct. One day, however, he had a sudden flash of insight and announced that he thought he could solve a problem the teacher had put on the board which none of the other pupils could solve.

The whole class laughed. Whereupon he became indignant strode to the blackboard and solved the problem. In doing so he realized that he could understand arithmetic. He felt a new confidence in his ability and went on to become a good mathematics student.

The point is that Adler had been hypnotized by a false belief about himself. For the power of hypnosis is the power of belief. If you have accepted an idea from yourself, your teachers, parents, friends or any other source and if you are convinced that the idea is true, it has the same power over you as the hypnotist's words have over his subject.

Negative thinking can limit each of us if we let it. And, conversely within your right now is the power to do things you never dreamed possible.

Questions :

- (i) What is the impact of our self-image ?
- (ii) How can we improve our self-image ?
- (iii) How did Dr. Adler break loose from his negative self-belief ?
- (iv) Dr. Alfred Adler was a famous :
 - (A) Psychologist
 - (B) Cytologist
 - (C) Psychiatrist
 - (D) Hypnotist

(9)

(v) Negative thinking cannot limit each of us if we let it.

(B) An adjective

(C) An interjection

(B) Began

(C) Reached

(D) None of these

1. Read the following passage. Make notes and write a summary with a suitable title :

Vitamin D increases the efficiency of the intestine to absorb calcium and phosphorus from food in order to mineralize the bones in the body. It also increases the activity of bone cells that make and lay down bone matrix. The bone matrix is like the frame of a building.

If the body has adequate amounts of calcium and phosphorus, they are incorporated into the bone matrix and the result is a strong, healthy skeleton. Our skin can make Vitamin D when it is exposed to sunlight. However, most people living in North America do not get enough sunlight in the winter to make adequate amounts of the vitamin.

Young children who do not get enough calcium and Vitamin D are unable to properly mineralise the bone matrix. Consequently, when gravity pushes on the skeleton, it causes the typical bowing of the legs seen in a child with the disease called rickets.

In adults, a deficiency in both Calcium and Vitamin D will increase the risk of bone fracture. Vitamin D is necessary to increase the body's ability to absorb calcium. If the body does not have enough Vitamin D, it can absorb only 10 to 15% (per cent) of the calcium it receives. If the bloodstream does not have enough calcium, it will draw out of the bones, which causes osteoporosis.

Vitamin D is a fat-soluble vitamin that primarily aids calcium absorption for promoting mineralization of bones. It is also involved in various functions of your immune, digestive, circulatory and nervous systems. Researches say that it help prevent a variety of diseases, such as depression, diabetes, cancer and heart disease.

There are various ways of improving Vitamin D level in body. Spending time in sunlight as Vitamin D is often referred as "the Sunshine Vitamin". In fact the UV-B radiations from the sun in contact with your skin produce Vitamin D. Consuming sea food and fatty fish as they are the richest natural food source of this vitamin. Eating lots of mushrooms as due to exposure to sunlight wild mushrooms usually have plenty of Vitamin D. Including Egg yolks in diet. Eating fortified foods such as cow's milk, soya milk, almond and hemp milk. Taking orange juice and ready to eat cereals and certain types of yogurt. For many people it may be easy and comfortable to use Vitamin D supplements needed if they don't obtain much of it from food or sunlight. These supplements are readily available in the market and can be taken as per doctor's advice. 5+5=

2. Read the passage carefully and answer the questions that follow :

Everyone in a particular society recognizes social roles : father, mother, child, teacher, student, police officer, store clerk, doctor, judge, political leader and so on. Every culture expects certain types of behaviour from people who play certain social roles. Anyone occupying a given position is expected to adopt a specific attitude.
A store clerk is expected to take care of customers patiently and politely and a judge is expected to make wise and fair decisions above laws.

Informal social roles are not always easy to recognize, but can be identified with careful research. They are key indicators of a group's health and happiness. Within the family, one informal role is the

And finally, there is the family friend, the person who provides comfort and companionship to the family members with emotional needs.

Similarly, the role of political leaders in a society is also very vital and valuable in itself. In fact, any political activity socializes and educates citizens for finding and creating opportunities, respect and justice for themselves. In fact, citizens do not rule themselves unless

Ever since the appearance of man on earth, information has been the major cause of his progress and development. But information alone is not enough. Information has to be processed, put to use by logic and reason before it becomes useful knowledge. Information technology includes and encompasses within itself the whole technological, social and cultural phenomena that promise an excellent future for mankind. The 21st Century is a century of IT. Just as the steam engine emerged to be the technology of the 19th century and computer technology enhanced the capacity of the human brain in the 20th century, IT is the in-thing in the 21st Century. The global information infrastructure has established thousands and thousands of servers and multitudes of personal computers in more than 150 countries. All these computers have been networked in the Internet system. The Internet, you will be surprised to learn, has taken five years to reach the first 50 million users. This number is increasing everyday. The day is not far when every human individual will have access to the brain to every other human individual in the world and the two would be able to exchange information on any and every topic under the sun.

(3)

There is a similar revolution in the field of education. No student, anywhere in the world, will now be deprived of the best information available on any subject in any part of the world. The best course material, the best teachers and the best teaching aids and tools will be available to one and all. Education, in fact, is the biggest beneficiary of IT. Several projects like hired classroom of the USA, National Grid of the U.K., operation knowledge of India, are already underway, to bring the Internet to the actual classrooms of every village in every country.

In the field of social and cultural development also, IT is fast showing its wonderful impact. Home shopping, telebanking, video conferencing, e-mail, videophones, etc. are bringing the peoples of the world closer together and ushering in an era of mutual goodwill, understanding and harmonious relationships. Similarly, E-governance is bringing in well-informed, quick decisions and transparency in administration. No missing files, no red tape, no delay, better records, quick service and no dishonesty or fooling this will soon become the order of the day.

In short, every aspect of human life under the sun will see a vast change. We used to talk of a utopia, heaven of our dreams. I am sure it is coming.

3. Read the Passage carefully and answer the questions that follow :

Air pollution is an issue that concerns us all alike. One can willingly choose or reject the food, a drink, or a life comfort, but unfortunately, there is little choice for the air we breathe. All that is there in the air is inhaled by one and all living in those surroundings. Air pollutant is defined as a substance that is present while normally it is not there or present in an amount exceeding the normal concentrations. It could either be gaseous or a particulate matter. The important and harmful polluting gases are carbon monoxide, carbon dioxide, ozone and oxides of sulphur and nitrogen. The common particulate pollutants are the dust of various inorganic or organic origins. Although we often talk of the outdoor air pollution caused by industrial and vehicular exhausts, indoor pollution may prove to be as or a more important cause of health problems. Recognition of air pollution is relatively recent. It is not uncommon to experience a feeling 'suffocation in a closed environment.' It is often ascribed to the lack of oxygen. Fortunately, however, the composition of air is remarkably constant all over the world.

There is about 79 percent nitrogen and 21% oxygen in the air, the other gases forming a very small fraction. Carbon dioxide indeed exhaled out of lungs may accumulate in a closed and overcrowded place. But such an increase is usually small and temporary unless the room is airtight. Exposure to poisonous gases such as carbon monoxide may occur in a closed room. This may also prove to be fatal. What is more common in a poorly ventilated home is a vague constellation of symptoms described as the sick building syndrome. It is characterised by a general feeling of malaise, headache, dizziness and irritation of mucous membranes. It may also be accompanied by nausea, itching, aches, pains and depression. Sick building syndrome is commoner in big cities with small houses, which are generally over-furnished. Some of the important pollutants whose indoor concentrations exceed those of the outdoors include gases such as carbon monoxide, carbon dioxide, oxides of nitrogen and organic substances like spores, formaldehyde, hydrocarbon aerosols and allergens. The sources are attributed to a variety of construction materials, insulations, furnishings, adhesives, cosmetics, house dust, fungi and other indoor products.

By-products of fuel combustion are important in houses with indoor kitchens. It is not only the burning of dried dung and fuel wood which is responsible but also kerosene and liquid petroleum gas. Oxides of both nitrogen and sulphur are released from their combustion. Smoking tobacco in a closed environment is an important source of indoor pollution. It may not be high quantitatively, but significantly hazardous for health. It is because there are over 3,000 chemical constituents in tobacco smoke, which have been identified. These are harmful to human health. Microorganisms and all allergens are of special significance in the causation and spread of diseases. Most of the infective illness may involve more persons of a family living in a common indoor environment. These include viral and bacterial diseases like tuberculosis. Besides infections, allergic and hypersensitivity disorders are spreading fast. Although asthma is the most common form of respiratory allergic disorder, pneumonia is not uncommon, but more persistent and serious. These are attributed to exposure to allergens from various fungi, moulds, hay and other organic materials. Indoor air ventilation systems, coolers, air conditioners, dampness, decay, pet animals etc. are responsible for these diseases. The spectrum of pollution is very wide and options are limited. Indoor pollution may be handled relatively easily by an individual. Moreover, the good work must start from one's own house.

1. Read the following passage. Make notes and write a summary with a suitable title :

Self-help is the best kind of help. It enables us to overcome all the difficulties and face all dangers. It is said that a man who depends upon himself may not need the help of others. Self-efforts and self-reliance are the keys to success. A heroic mind is ever ready 'to strive, to seek, to find and not to yield'. Then there are idlers and shirkers who look up to God for help and do not work hard themselves. Since they lack self-confidence, they are bound to face failures. Those who put their shoulders to the wheel are also helped by God. A Cartman whose carriage was stuck up in mud, applied his shoulders in its wheel and God Hercules also helped him in taking it out of the mud. Our self efforts along with our full faith in God, are often crowned with success. The lives of all great men remind us that it has always been their self-help and self-reliance, self-effort and self-confidence that have led them to success in life. It is pluck and not luck that carries the day. 5+5=10

2. Read the passage carefully and answer the questions that follow :
- If a man has health and wealth, he needs two others to be happy :
(a) a stable framework built round a central purpose, (b) 'play' or doing things for fun. The suitable framework must be an outward expression of fairly constant impulses, e.g., those connected with family or work. But sometimes family becomes hateful and work painful. They cannot bring happiness. If at that time a man looks upon his duty towards the family or regards his work as 'play', he can get happiness. Much depends upon our attitude towards life. Our mind can make a heaven of hell or hell of heaven. Life is tragedy to those who feel; it is a comedy to those who think. Even the we take them non-seriously as 'play' and discharge our duties for fun. Doing things for fun saves us from a lot of disappointment in case of our failure. Life is a vast play-ground where we are players. We have to play the game of life good-humouredly. Success of failure, victory or defeat does not matter much. Our motto should be "play up ! play up ! play up ! play up the game" ! This means that we should take things easy and discharge our duties in a spirit of play or fun.
